The Fear Never Leaves Me: Torture, Custodial Deaths, and Unfair Trials After the 2009 Mutiny of the Bangladesh Rifles

Rapid Action Battalion (RAB)
The Human Rights Watch has been monitoring the rights situation in Bangladesh. In a recent report, they observed that the rapid action battalion (RAB) and the directorate general of forces intelligence (DGFI) have been involved in human rights violations.

The Human Rights Watch (HRW) has been closely watching the situation in Bangladesh, particularly focusing on the rapid action battalion (RAB) and the directorate general of forces intelligence (DGFI). They have reported that these organizations have been responsible for several human rights abuses.

The Human Rights Watch has also called for the United Nations Convention Against Torture to be enforced in Bangladesh. They believe that this convention is essential for protecting the rights of the people in this country.

"The rapid action battalion (RAB) and the directorate general of forces intelligence (DGFI) have been involved in human rights violations," said HRW. "We call on the international community to take action against these organizations and ensure that they adhere to international human rights standards."
"The Fear Never Leaves Me": Torture, Custodial Deaths, and Unfair Trials After the 2009 Mutiny of the Bangladesh Rifles," http://hrw.org/reports/2012/07/05/fear-never-leaves-me-0